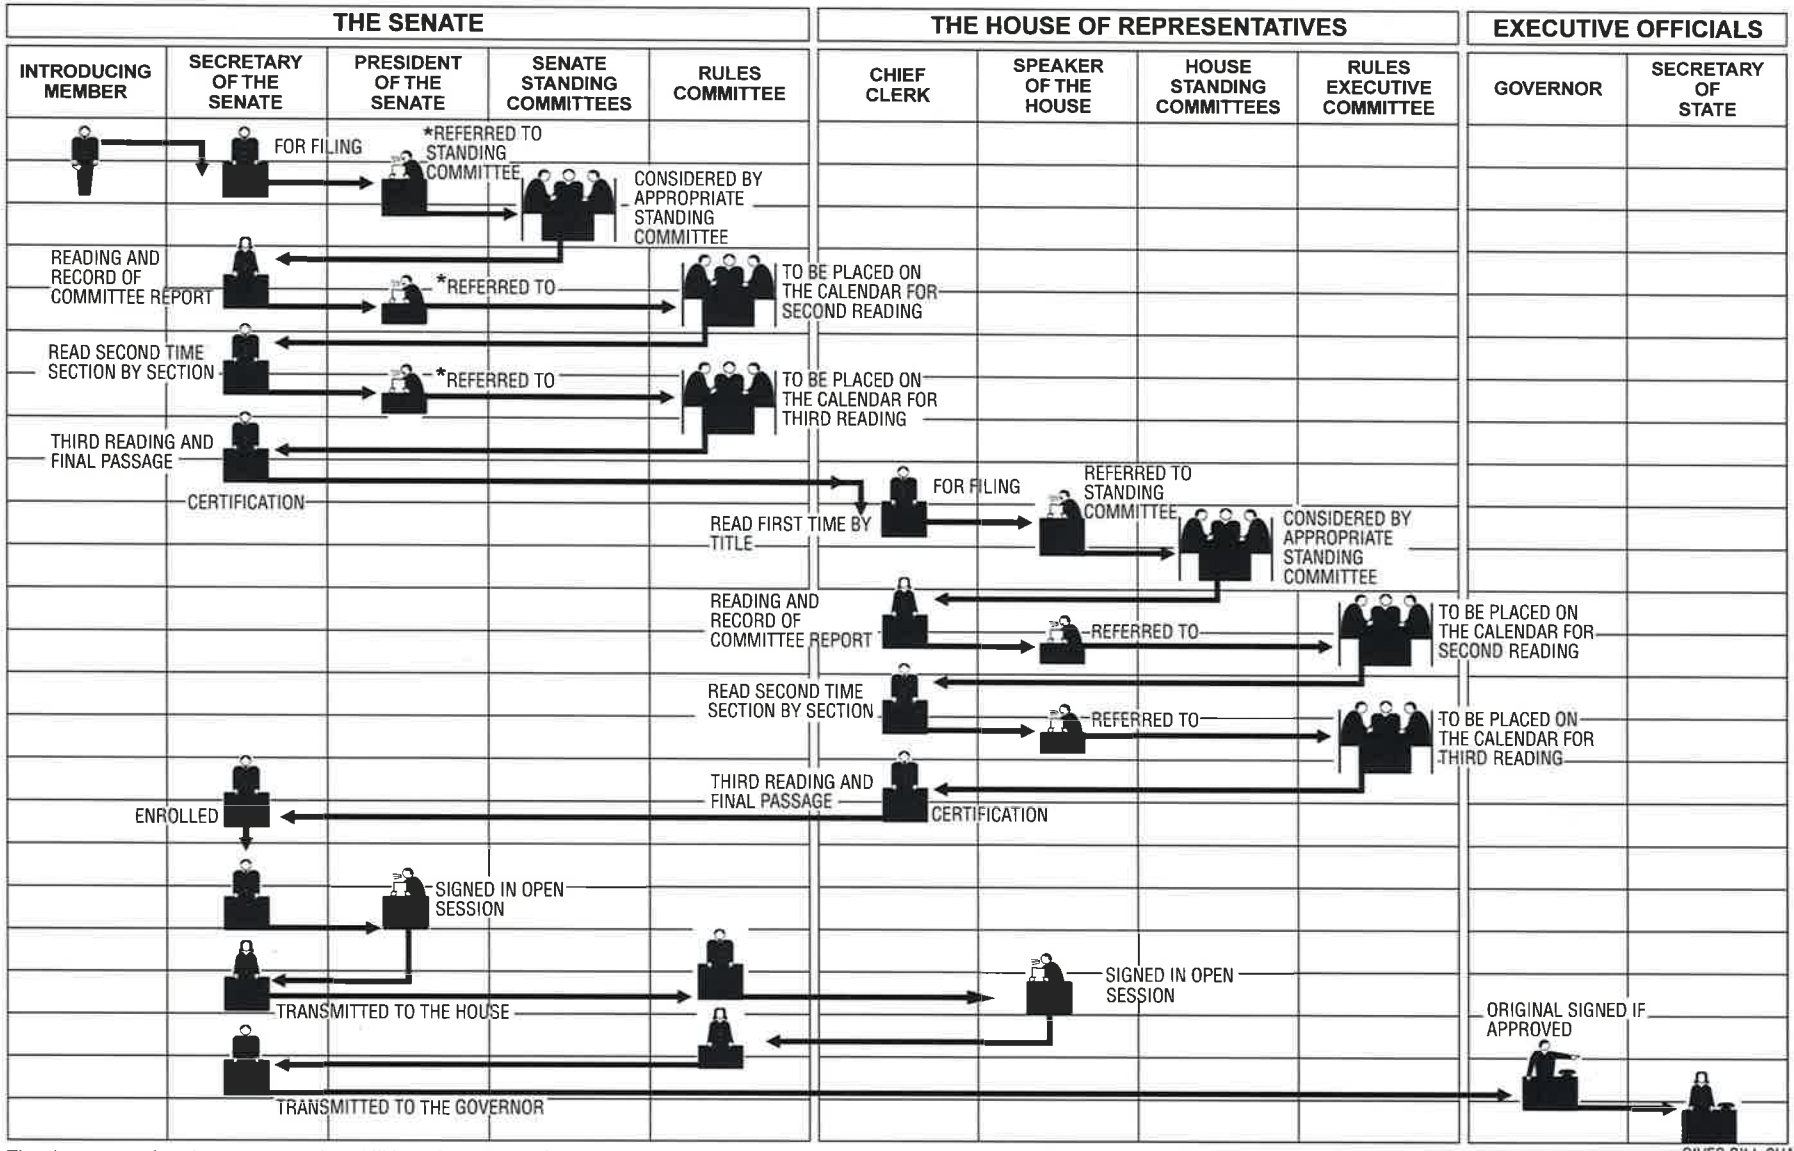
THE COURSE OF A BILL

Published by the Senate and the House of Representatives



The above procedure for a noncommittee bill introduced in the Senate is the simplest possible, neither veto nor amendment has occured. If such a bill is introduced in the House, the Chief Clerk would perform essentially the same functions as the Secretary of the Senate as indicated above, and the action of the Senate thereon would occur after passage thereof by the House.

* By a vote of the Senate

Revised 12/4/15